

3. Parish Church of María Inmaculada de Vera

The Parish Church of María Inmaculada de Vera was built after the Spanish Civil War between 1949 and 1953, upon becoming a parish independent of the Hermitage of Vera.

The architectural complex consists of the church and outbuildings, including the manse and an assembly hall. The façade is similar to the colonial type and the dome is influenced by the neighbouring hermitage of Vera.

Inside, the nave has six sections, a rectangular floor plan and a roof with wooden beams. The apse is in the shape of a Roman basilica. The mural paintings in the nave's arches are scenes from the life of Mary and Jesus, and the mural in the vault of the presbytery is a scene of the Virgin Mary stamping on the dragon of the Apocalypse.

The parish leaders have always been especially sensitive to the employment and social problems of the residents of La Malvarrosa. It was an educational centre in the 70s.
