

4. Plaza de Félix Robillard

The Plaza de Félix Robillard was built among the former properties of the historic botanist. Avenida de la Malvarrosa takes its name from his estate.

Robillard was the head gardener of the Champs Elysees and was hired in 1848 as the senior gardener at the Botanical Garden of Valencia.

His fame derives from his horticultural establishment, his publications, his recognition in scientific societies, and for the great improvements to the health of the land in the modern-day neighbourhood of la Malvarrosa.

He promoted the industrial-scale cultivation of geranium, pelargonium capitatum, commonly known as malvarrosa (hollyhock).

He was the founder of the first essences and toilet soaps factory in Spain.

The export of his perfumes promotes the name of Valencia throughout the entire world.

He has been buried at the Cabanyal Cemetery since 1888.

General information

Address: Avenida de la Malvarrosa, 101, 46011 Valencia

Area: 2,223 m²

Located in a flat area, with cobbled paving and compacted earth. It has dropped kerbs in the crossing areas with tactile-visual signage.

It has a children's play area, a sports area with exercise equipment, a drinking fountain and an area for parking bicycles.

Parking

A space reserved for people with reduced mobility in Avenida Malvarrosa, 197 with an area of more than 200 x 460cm. It has horizontal and vertical signage, it is located less than 10 m from the accessible route to the plaza.

Mobility

Its pavements have free passage more than 150 cm wide.

It has urban furniture for resting distributed throughout the Plaza. There is an information panel at a height of 100-180 cm.

Mobility

Paving on pavements with tactile-visual signage.

Pavements that are over 150 cm wide.

There may be unmarked overhanging elements on the itinerary.

It has a panel with information, written in medium-sized text and colour contrast.

Mobility

There are information panels with pictograms or short texts indicating spaces and itineraries.